for more detailed information on the changes. As we release builds at irregular intervals, release notes for any changes to the stock Mac OS X operating system comes with a built-in version of iTunes. An updated version of Apple's iTunes that lets you download music directly to your iPhone or iPod, and iTunes is integrated into your Mac's Finder. The idea is that by adding files to iTunes, you can sync them to your Mac automatically. With the new Audio Hijack Pro (ahp) plugin, you can use your iTunes to sync your iPod and play music while you also record from your audio interface! A simple to use yet very powerful plugin, the Audio Hijack Pro can do the following : Record your mix with an audio interface. By pressing the record button on the interface, your audio interface will record audio to the hard disk, and the audio stream will be routed into the laptop's audio interface (in the sound card or software audio engine). Now you can send the audio to your desktop for further processing. Use Audio Hijack Pro to record any type of audio or signal, from a microphone to a radio source, or any audio interface's audio stream. You can even have your Mac record any audio or instrument that is playing on your computer, including your iTunes music collection or YouTube videos. You can send the audio to your desktop with a simple right-click on the pop-up button. From the "Destination" section, select "Copy to Desktop" and click the button. Simply drag your audio onto the pop-up window and drop. And that's it! 1. The Audio Hijack Pro plugin is compatible with most virtual audio interfaces and audio recorders (hardware based or software based). 2. The audio must be routed to your audio interface. In the Audio Hijack Pro plugin, you can adjust the recording input with an external audio interface or other audio signal sources such as a microphone. Simply drag and drop the audio you want to route to your audio interface onto the pop-up window. After you select "OK", you will hear a beep sound and the audio you selected will be recorded into your audio interface. 3. The audio recording format can be MP3, WAV or AAC. There are many ways to route the audio stream to your audio interface. For example, you can route the audio from your external audio interface directly to your Mac's audio interface. Or
