Apr 22, 2020 The latest version of the software was released just in time for the AATTC summer 2020 course. Mar 21, 2020 February 12-14, 2020. Cardiff, UK. Event Information: This course is aimed at optical network designers, engineers, and technical staff who require an understanding of the optical . Bismuth Oxy-nitride: Solid-state lasers and interferometric characterizations of a monolith. We present the fabrication of a solid-state laser and the use of bismuth oxy-nitride as a gain medium. .The bismuth oxy-nitride crystal is grown in a reactor and a radial-polarization prism is used to generate the laser. .We report the characterization of the laser via the second-harmonic generation of the . Additional information:. The bismuth oxy-nitride crystal is doped with selenium and Nd:YAG. The whole crystal is grown from a melt of bismuth, oxide of bismuth, and selenium. 3:1 ratio of Bi_4O_3 to Se. The crystal has a rhombohedral structure, space group $R\bar{3}c$, with lattice constants: $a = 0.3515 \text{ nm}$, $c = 0.4537 \text{ nm}$. The solid solution formed by doped Bi_4O_3 and

Nd:YAG in annealed crystals is $\text{Bi}_2\text{O}_3\text{-Nd}_2\text{O}_3\text{-SeO}_2$. The most important defect in this solid solution is an oxygen vacancy. This vacancy can be considered a defect of the perovskite structure of the undoped Bi_4O_3 . This vacancy is a very effective charge-trapping center. The application of a higher electric field creates a nonuniform distribution of the electric field in the crystal, favoring the emission of the charge carriers. The lifetime of the charge carriers in the crystal is of the order of seconds. We have built a laser that is second-harmonic generation from the bismuth oxy-nitride with a wavelength of 1064 nm. The bismuth oxy-nitride represents a material with an important class of rare-earth ion. The crystalline structure of the ions of the rare-earth can be enriched in various ways, leading to the formation of polycrystals and to various forms of crystalline disorder. Here, we describe the fabrication of a bismuth oxy-nitride crystal with Se. The crystal is
