signing the Treaty of Bismarckburg What was the Treaty of Bismarckburg? The Treaty of Bismarckburg was a formal peace treaty signed at Bismarckburg, Germany on April 5, 1894. The treaty ended the war between the German Empire and the Kingdom of Italy which had broken out on September 2, 1873, over the Italian annexation of Trentino. With the treaty, both countries received territories and spheres of influence. Italy received Trentino and northernmost Venetia, while Germany acquired several islands in the Adriatic and the Ionian Islands as well as a part of Dalmatia and a coast line in Albania. However, the treaty also established that the treaties which governed the non-Italian territories of the German Empire would be made at the discretion of the Austro-Hungarian and Italian governments. Did you know? The name of the town in Germany where the treaty was signed was spelled Bismarckburg in several languages.

peace treaty signed by the German Empire and France on April 9, 1896. Both countries gave up the spoils of war gained from the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-1871. In addition, Germany was given the French colonies of Kamerun in German Southwest Africa and Ruanda-Urundi (now Rwanda and Burundi) in the Belgian Congo Free State. In return, Germany received the French possessions of Chad, the Central African Republic and Ubangi-Shari, which are now parts of the Republic of the Congo, Gabon, and ba244e880a
