Interactions of chlorotoxin, charybdotoxin, and [d-phe6,d-trp7] charybdotoxin with K⁺ channels. Chlorotoxin and its longer-chain analogues [d-phe6,d-trp7] charybdotoxin and charybdotoxin have been studied in a number of systems for interactions with K⁺ channels and for inhibition of neurotransmitter release. The binding affinity of the toxins has been determined in a variety of physiological systems, with K_d values varying from 4 to 5 x 10⁽⁻⁸⁾ M. Binding studies using inside-out membrane vesicles from rat adrenal medullary cells and pituitary cells of the intermediate lobe of the pituitary gland revealed that the binding of charybdotoxin was 4-6-fold tighter than that of the other toxins. With guinea-pig brain synaptosomes, which have high levels of K⁺ channels, charybdotoxin, [d-phe6 2d92ce491b
