Branko Vucinic Branko Vucinic (; born 27 February 1989 in Split, Croatia) is a Croatian football player who currently plays for FK Vojvodina. Club career Vucinic started his football career with local club NK Lokomotiva in his home town of Split. He joined the first team in 2005, at the age of 17. In the summer of 2008, Vucinic moved to another Croatian club RNK Split for a transfer fee €10 million. He made his debut for RNK Split on 6 August 2008 in a friendly match against Mladost Lučani which ended in a 2–1 win for the home side. After a successful season at RNK Split, Vucinic was nominated for a spot in the Croatian National Team for the 2010 FIFA World Cup. On 8 June 2010, he signed a five-year deal with Bundesliga side Borussia Mönchengladbach. On 12 July 2011, he was released by Borussia, only one year after signing a five-year contract. On 15 January 2012, it was announced that Vucinic would sign for Turkish club Beşiktaş J.K. for €2.25 million. On 3 January 2013, it was announced that Vucinic would sign with FK Vojvodina on a free transfer on a contract running until the end of the season. International career In 2008, Vucinic was named in Croatia's preliminary squad for the Euro 2008 tournament in Austria and Switzerland. He started in three of their matches at the tournament, playing the full 90 minutes in all three matches. He replaced Mario Mandžukić in extra time of their final game against the Czech Republic and scored a vital winning goal, a 50-yard free kick on the turn after a corner by Mandžukić. His other appearances for the national team were games against Greece and Japan, both ended with losses. Vucinic was named in the Croatian squad for the 2010 FIFA World Cup. He played two matches for Croatia in the World Cup, replacing Dražen Ladić in the last 10 minutes of their second group stage match against Uruguay. Croatia won 2–0 and progressed to the knockout stage. Career statistics Club International Honours Beşiktaş Turkish Cup: 2012–13 References d4474df7b8
