Reason: Access denied for user '@localhost' (using password: YES) So the first thing I did was try typing in MyPassword again and got the same dialog box saying: Access denied for user '@localhost' (using password: YES) Then I tried typing in a random password and I got the same dialog box saying: Access denied for user '@localhost' (using password: YES) I'm really confused right now, because I have no idea what is wrong here. The password I'm typing into the field is definitely not the password of the user, and it is definitely a secure password. Also, I typed in the wrong password. A: Access denied for user '@localhost' The password you are trying to use does not have the right number of characters. You need to use a password with 8+ characters. You can configure the size of your password as well See here for more info If you've ever wondered whether your business will rise or fall on the shoulders of a powerful influencer in your field, you should know the answer now: yes. While only a small percentage of businesses can rely on social media as a source of leads, for those of you who are tapping into the very best of Twitter, Instagram and LinkedIn, you're well on your way to rapid growth. As we've been talking about for the last month, brands such as Target, Apple and Twitter are leading the way and bringing new Twitter followers to businesses every day. The question for any business is: what makes you the right choice? Let's take a look at the numbers. In a recent report from Datanyze, the social media management firm found that brands are seeing a dramatic surge in Twitter followers. During 2d92ce491b
