Checkmate:Trailers for transporting cargo, such as cargo containers, roll-on/roll-off ships, railcars, and the like are generally well-known. An example of a trailer for use with cargo containers is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 5,199,824 ("the '824 patent") to Nelson, which is hereby incorporated by reference. The '824 patent discloses a trailer having a longitudinally extending pair of rearwardly extending load transfer arms with a center portion of the trailer body having a top end, a bottom end, and two side ends that are rotatably connected to the center portion by the load transfer arms to enable the trailer body to rotate about a transverse axis as the trailer is towed behind a vehicle. The center portion of the trailer body is connected to one end of a wheel axle, and one of the side ends of the trailer body is connected to a second wheel axle that is spaced apart from the first wheel axle. The trailer body also includes two spaced, longitudinally extending load transfer arms that have a pivotally mounted cargo container receptacle connected at a top end and a second end that is connected to one of the wheel axles. The receptacle is pivotally mounted to one of the load transfer arms at a fixed angle to the load transfer arm and is pivotable between an open cargo receiving position and a closed cargo retaining position. Although the '824 patent trailer described above has proved to be quite suitable for transporting cargo containers, trailers having additional features that facilitate loading and unloading cargo containers are needed. One such trailer is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 5,934,381 ("the '381 patent") to Nelson, which is hereby incorporated by reference. The trailer of the '381 patent has a longitudinally extending wheel assembly, a longitudinally extending wheel platform, and a wheel support axle that extends from the trailer
