The Roanoke order will round out the anthology’s 2018 lineup with a return to Roanoke, Va., the setting of the series’ debut season, AHS: Asylum. Production is currently underway in Vancouver and there will be a press tour on Roanoke this summer. Murphy wrote the script with AHS: Roanoke’s fifth season, Roanoke, being the first to go out on a feature length roller coaster. Murphy, who has said AHS: Roanoke is the biggest order for his series, was hands on with the Roanoke filming, which will feature a murder in the woods and the trailer for the title of season six will be released to fans on Thanksgiving Day for the series’ return. All the Roanoke cast will be reunited as well, with Sarah Paulson, Evan Peters, Lily Rabe, Angela Bassett, Billie Lourd and Cheyenne Jackson all set to return to the town of Roanoke. The anthology season will shoot in New Orleans, with Murphy having filmed the season 4 episode, Carnival at Bonhomme National Cemetery, at the cemetery there. Other parts of the Roanoke sextet will revolve around the central story line of the inmates at Briarcliff Manor, the mental hospital from the second season’s Asylum. Murphy, known for his horror stories in the genre, will direct the first episode of Roanoke. The series went on hiatus in January before Murphy confirmed to EW that Roanoke was in development. The series has been a ratings hit for FX, its most recent 13-episode season averaging 1.5 million total viewers. Murphy is repped by CAA.Q:
