I don't know what the word "tourist" is." "It's not a term I'm familiar with." "Would you say I'm a tourist?" "Maybe in some ways you are." "In some ways?" "No, you're not a tourist." "You know what?" "We are about to have an argument over semantics and I can't handle a thing like that right now." "Okay, enough with the semantics." "I'm always doing that when we get in a fight, remember?" "It's fine, you got a point." "You just gotta get out of the house." "I need to eat right now." "Maybe you do need to eat." "I just need you to eat with me." "Yeah, okay." "Okay." "Does the light in here hurt your eyes?" "No, it's okay." "Are you sure?" "Yes." "I was told that you were blind." "Not really." "I mean, we have one of the largest hospitals in the country, so, we have a lot of guests, and we're very private people, so..." "He's not home at the moment, so..." "It's okay." [An auditory brainstem response in the evaluation of the neuropathology of the ear]. The auditory brainstem response was studied in a reference neuropsychiatric hospital. The records of 100 patients were analysed. The response was compared with the results of a clinical examination, neuro-radiological investigation and with findings at post mortem examination. A typical brainstem auditory evoked response was present in 45% of the patients, and in 15% of these patients, neuro-radiological abnormalities were found. These findings coincided in 78% of cases. On a series of 57 autopsies, none of them showed response without the corresponding lesion. Overall, the response was found to be positive in 42% of cases. In 13% of cases, neuro-radiological lesions were detected without an evoked response. In these cases, the response was typical, and in 8 patients, a conduction disorder was suspected. Furthermore, in 6 out of 12 patients in whom no auditory brainstem response was found after the death of the patient, a peculiar form of neuro-radiological lesion was found at the post mortem examination. This form of lesion has been named 'purely' auditory brainstem response, as no other neuro-psychiatric lesion was found. We therefore think that such form of response indicates a lesion in the auditory pathway, and that all lesions of this kind are likely to exhibit such form of response.Q: Django - Update user profile after user registered (sign up) Well, i started with Django 1.7 and now I'm stuck again with Django 1.8 and I can't find the answer for my issue.
