The effects of different oxygen tension on the expression of the cyclooxygenase-2 (COX-2) and nitric oxide synthase 2 (NOS-2) genes in human-induced placental explants were studied. Placentas from healthy women were induced by cesarean section after labor at term. A total of 22 explants, 7 normoxic and 15 hypoxic, were established in the different conditions of culture. Total RNA was extracted and subjected to real-time reverse transcription polymerase chain reaction. The expression of COX-2 was higher in normoxic cultures than in hypoxic explants. In contrast, NOS-2 expression was higher in hypoxic cultures. The expression of the apoptotic gene FAS was higher in normoxic cultures, whereas the expression of the anti-apoptotic gene Bcl-2 was higher in hypoxic cultures. A higher expression of the COX-2 gene was associated with a higher apoptosis index in normoxic placentas. In contrast, the apoptosis index was significantly higher in hypoxic placentas. These findings indicate that oxygen tension regulates the expression of apoptosis-related genes, but COX-2 and NOS-2 are not involved in the regulation of apoptosis in the placenta, suggesting that COX-2 and NOS-2 have different roles in the regulation of placental function.Wednesday, November 26, 2010 Back in the 80's, when I was young, the Super Bowl was on par with Christmas. In general, the thermal transfer recording method comprises the steps of: providing a recording sheet in which a heat-fusible ink layer is formed on a base sheet of plastic film, paper, or the like; and heat-fusing the ink layer with an ink ribbon or master sheet, thereby obtaining a transferred image on the recording sheet. This method has an advantage over the conventional offset printing method in that the recording sheet is not contaminated by the offset ink and the printing is possible even when the printing paper or plain paper is used as the recording sheet. The thermal transfer recording method has recently come into wide use in the fields of recording, such as, e.g., telecommunication equipment, facsimile equipment, computer terminal equipment, and medical measuring instruments. The thermal transfer recording medium generally used is one including a base sheet made of a plastic film, paper or the like, and an ink layer provided thereon for transferring the image of the ink ribbon or the master sheet to the recording sheet. The ink layer, which consists of a wax and a binder, is heat-fused to the recording sheet with the
