1. Field of the Invention The invention relates to an improved seal for use with a can. 2. Description of the Prior Art In U.S. Pat. No. 4,465,089 there is disclosed a can seal which in general is comprised of an annular member of resilient, thermoplastic material, which member is secured at its inner annular edge by a circumferential extension to the upper edge of a domed lid. The lid edge is formed by an inner ridge which projects upwardly, defining a recess for a recessed edge of the annular member and a spring-like tongue, which overlies the annular member and is adapted to be squeezed between the lid edge and an annular member to yieldably deform the annular member. The seal of the prior art has been found to have various drawbacks. It has been found to be difficult to manufacture the seal to tolerances less than about 0.5 mm. This is because of the difficulty in aligning the lid edge with the annular member and in squeezing the annular member onto the lid edge. The resilience of the annular member can also be a problem in that the force of squeezing the annular member onto the lid edge may cause the annular member to distend, allowing the recessed edge to move downwardly, and thereby potentially causing a leaking can.
