P38 is a new member of the mitogen-activated protein kinase (MAPK) family, which is activated by a variety of stress signals. P38 has also been shown to be involved in apoptosis in some cell systems, but the precise role of p38 in apoptosis has not yet been clarified. Thus, in the present study, we investigated the role of p38 in apoptosis of thymocytes by studying the subcellular distributions of p38 and its regulatory subunit, pp38. We found that pp38 was mainly localized in nuclei and cytoplasm in mouse thymocytes, and this was increased in dexamethasone-induced apoptosis. The expression of p38 and pp38 were both increased in dexamethasone-induced apoptosis of thymocytes. Both p38 and pp38 were diffusely distributed in the nucleus in the early stage of apoptosis, but concentrated in perinuclear or paranuclear region in late stage of apoptosis. Furthermore, pp38 was localized in the perinuclear region in early stage of apoptosis, and redistributed into the cytoplasm in late stage of apoptosis. These results suggested that pp38 might be involved in regulating apoptosis of thymocytes via a mechanism involving phosphorylation-dependent or -independent manner.. The meaning of the scalar quantity $\langle \psi | \rho | \psi \rangle$ was clarified in the supplementary text. [6]; In reality, we observe the fidelity
