To fix this error, you need to get a "System Restore" disc that's made specifically for your computer. Error: Another user or process has started the same process and has requested a restart If you get the error message above, it could be due to one of two issues. 1. A task in the background is accessing or using your computer. This could be a program that's open in the background, or antivirus scanning, or background tasks. 2. There is a process running in the background that is accessing your computer. For example, suppose that you are downloading a file, and the download manager is actually in the process of accessing your computer. In both scenarios, you'll need to terminate the processes using Task Manager. If you are using Windows 7, open the Task Manager by pressing CTRL+SHIFT+ESC, and selecting "Task Manager" from the list that appears. If you are using Windows Vista, open the Task Manager by pressing CTRL+ALT+DELETE, and selecting "Task Manager" from the list that appears. Then, right-click on the processes that are using the most system resources, and select End Process to terminate them. When you do this, you will immediately get the "Another user or process has started the same process and has requested a restart." error. This can be extremely irritating to have to close down all your programs, but in this scenario, you'll need to reboot your
