There are three types of connectors that can be added to the interface, as well as a variety of variables that can be associated with each of the connectors. A good example of the latter could be to show the difference in the amount of an income for every month in the different months of the year. New functions and variables can also be added to the interface with the help of the "Design" tab. The "Design" tab is not only a place where new functions can be created, but also offers a library of functions and variables that can be used to modify the way the interface looks. In addition to the functions, variables and connectors, there are also boxes that can be added to the interface. The interface is able
