AutoCAD is used by engineers and other professionals for the production of architectural drawings. In the real-world AutoCAD is used for CAD and drafting. Autodesk has grown to be one of the world's largest software companies, with over 20,000 employees in 2016. They also have a wide range of products including AutoCAD, Map 3D, 3ds Max, Inventor, and Maya. There are a range of CAD drafting products that are marketed to architects, engineers, and hobbyists. AutoCAD and a wide range of other Autodesk applications are available on the Windows, macOS, and Linux operating systems. Autodesk is a big part of the enterprise software market, they offer a range of products, and offer professional services to help with their software use. The most common types of CAD drawings are 2D drawings and 3D models. The majority of AutoCAD use is for 2D drafting and 2D models, AutoCAD was one of the first CAD packages to support the full range of 2D drawing types. 2D drawing tools An architectural drawing is typically made up of a large number of 2D drawings. A single 2D drawing is referred to as a sheet. The AutoCAD main screen is shown below, it is common to see multiple workbooks open at once. You can see in the above images how you can have multiple sheets open at once. Sketching tools You can sketch with a variety of tools that are built into AutoCAD. Snapping and drawing tools You can use the snap, grid and handle tools to place objects on the screen and to edit them. The two most common types of 2D objects in AutoCAD are rectangular objects (rectangles, squares, circles) and freeform objects (quads, polylines, splines, arcs, ellipses). Work at a faster pace When you're sketching and creating drawings in AutoCAD you can keep drawing without having to wait for the system to refresh. The system is updating continuously and while it is in a refresh mode you can continue to work. This is a common scenario when you're making a 2D drawing

Hepatitis A is a preventable illness caused by a virus that is spread through the fecal-oral route. Young adults are considered the highest-risk group for infection. In the United States, most states require a hepatitis A vaccine for school enrollment or for children who live in, or attend school in, a high-risk area. This qualitative study examined the decision-making process of five women between the ages of 25 and 40 who were considering the hepatitis A vaccination. Data were collected through six semistructured interviews, which were audio-recorded and transcribed verbatim. The thematic analysis approach was used to identify patterns of meaning in the data. The findings indicated that the participants' knowledge base and their beliefs about the benefits and risks of the vaccine were the most influential decision factors. This study adds to our understanding of the decision-making process women face when deciding to accept or decline the hepatitis A vaccine.Don't miss these Live Markets and Free Skills! In the context of this case, the court's finding that the defendant breached the warranty of habitability is "sufficient, in light of the proof before it, to support an award of damages, and, therefore, is not clearly erroneous." Id. at 1363 (emphasis added). [10] The court further concluded that the evidence supported an award of punitive damages. Id. at 1364. [11] There is also authority to the effect that a covenant to repair is not breached until the tenant actually repairs and obtains satisfaction. See, e.g., Schubert v. Young, 121 Wn.2d 173, 179-80, 849 P.2d 1312 (1993) (quoting Howard v. McCarley, 90 Wn.2d 443, 446-47, 584 P.2d 849 (1978)). However, in light of this court's ruling that the covenant to repair is enforceable against the landlord, we need not determine whether this rule is applicable here. [12] This paragraph is the only portion of the lease that expressly addresses the subject of waiver. In the portion of the lease that discusses the warranty of habitability, paragraph 14 states: "A Tenant's failure to follow any of the provisions of the Lease or any term or condition thereof, or the Tenant's waiver of any such provision or term or condition, or the Tenant's failure to cure any such violation within a reasonable time, will not affect the operation of the other provisions of the Lease."
