Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an electrophotographic printing apparatus and a process cartridge detachably mounted in the apparatus, and in particular, relates to an electrophotographic printing apparatus and a process cartridge detachably mounted in the apparatus in which a power supply which supplies a developing bias is divided into a first power supply for a primary transfer section and a second power supply for a secondary transfer section. 2. Description of the Related Art Electrophotographic printing apparatuses are widely used as printing apparatuses such as a copying machine and a printer for computers in offices. In general, an electrophotographic printing apparatus employs a process cartridge which is a cartridge type in which an image forming process unit is integrally mounted. This process cartridge is detachably mounted in the apparatus, and therefore, the user can replace the cartridge with a new one when the process cartridge is consumed. Generally, an image forming process unit of a process cartridge employs a contact charging system or a corona charging system for charging a photosensitive drum. However, when the contact charging system is employed, a countermeasure is taken for preventing the deterioration of a photosensitive drum or the wearing of a charging member. A certain amount of charge is previously supplied to the photosensitive drum, and a charging voltage is applied to the charging member and/or the photosensitive drum by supplying the charge to the charging member. Further, when the corona charging system is employed, a countermeasure is taken for preventing the deterioration of a charging wire, a charging unit and the like. A certain amount of charge is supplied to the photosensitive drum, and the charging voltage is applied to the charging member and/or the photosensitive drum by supplying the charge 4bc0debe42
