Registration key verypdf pdf2word v3.1Q: How can you code-style a line of code in a JTextArea? when I copy and paste a bunch of lines of code that I have here: private static void HandleInitialize(EventArgs e) { } I want to code-style them. How can I do that? A: You can't code-style it. But you can add class annotations with JTextArea::setLineClass. Example: private static void HandleInitialize(EventArgs e) { // This should probably be some actual code, not just "class" // Comments are fine, so long as they are outside of "class". } And for a more compact sample: private static void HandleInitialize(EventArgs e) { //@formatter:off public class { // This should probably be some actual code, not just "class" // Comments are fine, so long as they are outside of "class". } } As a side-note, creating 'classes' within a class is very bad style. It makes it much harder for someone reading the code to know what is and is not public and private. Instead, use separate methods and classes. Virginian-Pilot: U.S. Virgin Islands announced this week a study showing that the volume of marine life on island beaches is below previous levels even as ocean temperatures rise. 570a42141b
