River Danube (Turkey) The Danube River is a tributary of the Black Sea. It begins at Lake Balkan near the border with Bulgaria and flows along the Balkan peninsula for . It then separates Bulgaria from Romania and flows through the Danube Delta where it empties into the Black Sea. The average discharge of the Danube from its source to its mouth is. As a crossroads of civilizations and the river itself, the Danube is a boundary between three continents and two main religions: East and West. Origins and basin In prehistory, the Danube River was an insignificant stream of peripheral importance in the region. It was first noted in historic times during the reign of Caesar, after he crossed the river between Trieste and Illyria in 54 BC. In the West, the Danube passes through the Carpathian Mountains, through the passes of the Lipovo and Mureş rivers, and

Platinum Apps has now completed the migrate of its website from GoDaddy to the new hosting provider. Although not everyone was aware that the move was being made, it was a smooth one, with no issues whatsoever. The site is fast, the quality of the service is better and more importantly there is no risk of losing your data. It has been a while since our last update and we have done a lot of work to both the software and our website. In terms of our software we added many cool features to the individual applications such as support for multiple displays, font scaling, toolbars and even a new way of sharing a screen with someone else. We are also heavily developing our network management software, which we currently offer as a complete software suite for a fairly reasonable price. We are also offering the next level of service from our network management which includes the system management software and web-based configuration management as well as both physical and virtual machine monitoring. It also includes the ability to remotely-we-screenshare-with-you. Our website is now also in full swing at www.platinumapps.co.za where you will find all the latest software news and updates as well as plenty of great resources. Please click the link to take a look as we hope to get a lot of great things added in the near future. Next week we are going to be starting our network management training at SPC. You can find out more about the course on the SPC home page at www.spcnetwork.co.za. Should you wish to attend, please email admin@platinumapps.co.za as soon as possible. Also keep in mind that our Platinum-we-screenshare-with-you. will be starting its campaign to show appreciation-we-sc-crazy-good-pictures-of-you. in the next few weeks. As a thank you for your contribution to Platinum Apps, we are offering 30% discount in our new hosting package, which is similar to the one that was created at GoDaddy. If you are interested you can sign up for an account at www.platinumapps.co.za and you will get all the details. Although our software is not completely finalized yet, we are giving everyone free access for a limited time. So if you are interested in Platinum Apps Network Management, have a look at www.pl09e8f5149f

MidpX aims to ease the work of developers who intend on creating mobile apps using the Java ME technology. The package includes a standalone application alongside a browser add-on for Internet Explorer and a Windows Explorer integrated tool, enabling you to easily manage your J2ME programs. Integrated emulators Once installed, the MidpX toolbar is available in Internet Explorer and Windows Explorer, providing one-click access to all the available WTK emulators, four in number. There is the RI Midp Emulator, Rex's Midp Emulator, Midp2Exe Emulator and Kwysshell's Midp Emulator. The latter displays an interactive representation of a phone that can help you test the capabilities of your apps using the integrated debugging and tracing tools. During our testing, the emulators did not appear in the toolbar of more recent versions of Internet Explorer, but worked properly in editions lower than 8. OTA provisioning and JAR compiler The package also includes an integrated OTA provisioning agent that enables you to launch apps built using Java Mobile. The agent can load both online or local JAD files, reading the information stored inside the archives and launching the corresponding apps. Alternatively, MidpX can handle JAR files that rely on the Java ME technology, thanks to its built-in Midp2Exe emulator, whose purpose is to convert input JAR midlets into standalone executable files. The emulator runs exclusively in the command console, which might be a bit inconvenient to some. Nonetheless, its simple syntax should make it very easy to use. The compiler prompts you to enter the location of the source JAR file and optionally input the JAD description. It can generate files for both x86 and x64 system architectures and enables you to specify the output location. What's New In MidpX?

An integrated developer's package for building, debugging, and deploying mobile Java MIDlets using the open Java development platform (JDK). The package includes an application (app) for viewing and managing your MIDlets, and a browser toolbar add-on for accessing emulators and tools. Also includes an OTA provisioning agent to provision MIDlets on the phone itself without needing any host computer. [Middleware] MidpX SDK 1.0 Release Notes January 2014 Free update on the website: The MidpX SDK is available in both a standalone version and an integrated version. The standalone version can create and debug applications for both x86 and x64 architectures while the integrated version can only create and debug x86 applications. Also available on the website is the MidpX Explorer tool, a Windows 10 and Windows 8/8.1 Explorer toolbar for accessing the MidpX toolkit. Download the standalone package here or go directly to the website and click on the "Download" button. Fix for MidpX SDK being added to the list of updates December 2013 We have identified the MidpX SDK being added to the list of updates, from Monday, December 23rd 2013, but we regret to inform you that we will have to delay the update until a fix is found. Thank you for your patience and let us know if you have any questions. The MidpX SDK update will not be available on Monday, December 23rd, 2013. MidpX SDK provides you a toolkit for developing and debugging Java ME and MIDlets. The SDK provides you with a range of functions such as access to the MidpX app, which serves as an explorer and manager, and the IDE MidpX, a midlet development IDE that lets you choose the compilation and execution options. It also includes a provisioning agent that can be used to provision the MIDlets on the phone itself, without needing a host computer. Installation MidpX To use the MidpX toolkit you will need both the SDK version 1.3.3 and the Explorer toolkit version 1.0.9 and above. Download the latest version of the SDK from our website and click on the "Download" button. Download the Explorer toolkit from the website. You might have to install the latest versions of the SDK and the Explorer toolkit. Demo Visit the
