Ct. 2242 (2002), is a United States Supreme Court case in which the Court invalidated a Florida constitutional provision that prevented the expenditure of public funds for political campaigning by businesses. Justice Breyer delivered the opinion of the Court, in which Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justices O'Connor, Kennedy, Scalia, and Thomas joined. Background The Florida Constitution of 1885 prohibited political contributions by businesses. While this made it illegal for businesses to donate to candidates and their campaign organizations, it also barred them from publicly supporting candidates. In 2000, during an election year, Florida's Constitution was amended to prohibit all contributions to all candidates from businesses. Gannett Inc., publisher of The Orlando Sentinel, brought suit under the 2G, 3G, UMTS/WCDMA or GSM? Get the highest stable signal quality on your phone from the German mobile operator T-Mobile! Since the introduction of the UMTS (Universal Mobile Telephone System) in 1999, the mobile industry has been trying to make networks as stable as possible. The first mobile phones introduced the GSM standard, while GSM's bigger brother UMTS was introduced a few years later. UMTS provides better data rates, but does not work outdoors. Until the end of 2012, T-Mobile offers GSM and UMTS, allowing you to choose your service depending on your situation.
