I found this definition from a company, and cannot understand what does it mean. abstract class A1 { void f(int x) } abstract class A2 extends A1 { void f(double x) } abstract class A3 extends A2 { double g(int x) } class B1 extends A1 { void f(int x) { // bla bla } } class B2 extends A2 { void f(double x) { // bla bla } double g(int x) { return 2; } } class B3 extends A3 { double g(int x) { return 3; } } class C1 extends B1 { void f(int x) { // bla bla } } class C2 extends B2 { void f(double x) { // bla bla } double g(int x) { return 4; } } class C3 extends B3 { double g(int x) { return 5; } } What do those lines mean?
