A: You have to write doSomething = function(){...} as well like this. Otherwise you write the function and then overwrite it with a reference to the old function. function doSomething(){ console.log("Hi"); } doSomething(); // Callback will be executed only after doSomething() finishes. // Callback that just works, if you use new: var doSomething = function(){ console.log("Hi"); }() doSomething(); / @file 09e8f5149f
