Cowboy in the guardlands and top 10 So today was the first day for me to use the guardlands. I played the "arctic" rules and I was very surprised at the rain I encountered. Rain is a problem, especially in summer, but under these extreme conditions that's a big difference. I ran my guard through the rain and I'm very happy with the results. Here is the list that I came up with in 10 minute intervals and it was fairly consistent. Still time for more testing. Top Ten: 1) Bow & Arrow 2) Crossbow 3) Blunderbuss 4) Pistol

5) Explosives 6) Chain 7) Stone Axe 8) Machete 9) Spear 10) Blunt weapon (Your choice between a Knife, Bowie, Hatchet, or Mace) I am also excited to play the game with a real economy and trade. I am setting up a website now and will be introducing a game economy, and players will be able to pay for their adventures through trade. I

What's New in the?

When it comes to an image editor that's designed to accompany your favorite DSLR camera, nothing beats its developer. Pixia started with a single goal in mind: to develop a product that would make the manual work to improve your camera pics a bit more intuitive and easy. With this in mind, Pixia set off to create the modern photo editor that it is today. Overall, exPhoto is a simple but easy-to-use photo editor. There's nothing extraordinary or truly unique about the application. Moreover, Pixia didn't bother designing a user interface that's likely to make it a bit easier to browse and use it. As such, it's more of a matter of personal preference than anything else. With that said, Pixia's latest photo editor is still easy-to-use and fairly easy to find your way around. It's more of a package with a lot of tricks and tools, including a rich photo library and a few editing effects, ready to make your pictures come to life.
