Elliot Rodger was a bit of a loner growing up, and as I read his manifesto I saw, in his list of complaints, many things that are applicable to many young men: he was lonely, unhappy with his parents, etc. I thought of him often when I heard about the recent school shootings in Connecticut and Florida. It was clear that Elliot Rodger was a disturbed young man. But the shootings aren't just about Elliot Rodger. They are also a wake-up call for all of us. And I'm not just talking about young men. I'm talking about all of us. It doesn't matter what we do for a living, what sort of education we have, what our age is, or what type of religion we follow. It doesn't matter if you just bought a new pair of shoes or if you have a long-term partner. It doesn't matter if you are gay, straight
