Specific and reliable immunoscreening for the determination of leukocyte subpopulations in normal and pathological human mammary glands. The distribution of leukocyte subpopulations in normal and pathological mammary glands was studied by an immunoscreening method using monoclonal antibodies to lymphocyte subpopulations, T cells (OKT3), and to leukocyte adhesion molecules, asialo GM1 (asialo-GM1), and L-17. The results were compared with flow cytometry and immunohistochemistry with the use of polyclonal antibodies to leukocyte subpopulations. Our study confirms that in normal mammary glands no significant
