FileCannon With Key

FileCannon is a file sharing tool intended to provide file distribution services on the Internet. To be able to get your data from remote computers via the internet, you need to create a unique identifier for this data called a 'meta key'. This is what FileCannon is providing by using the 'Internet Accounts' feature. FileCannon is designed to avoid the problems related to some other file sharing software, that is to say, it is not a server or a download manager. You can choose from a large variety of predefined Internet Accounts including FTP, FTSP, Gopher, HTTP, MMS, MFS, RARP, and TELNET. You can also make your own account providing the meta key. The distribution of files can be done by using both FileCannon plug-ins and stand-alone applications. FileCannon has a built-in MMS client and a full-featured e-mail client. FileCannon is Internet software that allows your files to be shared with the internet. The functionality of this program includes...

2. Description of the Related Art Alzheimer's disease (AD) is a progressive neurodegenerative disorder with a significant impact on health and the economy of the United States. AD is the most common form of dementia and affects nearly 5 million Americans, and the number is projected to more than double every five years (National Institute on Aging, Alzheimer's Disease). The primary pathological feature of AD is amyloid deposition in the form of amyloid- β peptide (A β) plaques in the brain. These A β plaques are associated with chronic inflammation, a common feature of neurodegenerative diseases. Evidence is accumulating that A β plaques may also be associated with defects in cerebral energy metabolism and neurotransmitter function. Deficits in one or more of these cellular processes may result in cognitive impairments and memory loss. A β plaques have been linked to other common age-related neurodegenerative diseases such as, e.g., Parkinson's disease, frontotemporal dementia, and Lewy body disease. A β peptides are generated by the cleavage of the cellular protein β -amyloid precursor protein (APP), which is characterized by a cellular protein comprising a region near its amino terminus which can be digested by proteases to produce several C-
