Tinh Loi Airport (IATA: BLJ, ICAO: VLJA).Moonless Night Moonless Night: A Guide for Fostering You and Your Children's Creativity is a children's book co-written by author Joanna Cole and published in 1999 by Neal Porter Books. It is a guide to helping children foster creativity, especially in the field of art. The book explores a wide range of creative arts and what is necessary for children to flourish in these areas. Cole later expanded Moonless Night into a book series, called Moonless Nights, that targets children from 2–12 years of age and includes topics such as arts and crafts, music, dance, drama, puppets, and other activities. Background In the book, Cole draws from her own experience as a mother as she worked on the book. She had her first child at the age of 22 and through this experience, she came to understand how children experience their creativity. Before she became pregnant, she started experiencing the creative lulls, or dry spells. Cole decided to research what was going on. Her research revealed that a lot of children are affected by traumatic events during their creative development. This cause a negative effect on their creative growth. These traumatic events can happen early in life or later in life, and they need more of the children's attention than just having it. When the traumatic events are a hindrance to the child's creative development, Cole comes up with a framework of how to best help a child's creativity. Synopsis The book follows the maturation of a child's creative development in their life from birth to age 12. Cole explains that she understands this maturation
