In this post, we will show you the most important things to know in Photoshop Elements. 1. How to Use Photoshop Elements Photoshop Elements is easy to use. You should know how to adjust the colors and use the most popular tools. Open Photoshop Elements. You can open Photoshop Elements with one of three options: drag the Photoshop Elements icon to your desktop, open it from the Start menu, or double-click the Photoshop Elements icon. Click on the image below to see the tools Photoshop Elements provides. To open a new document, click on File, or from the File menu, choose Open. The following window appears. In the left section of the window, you can choose the image file. In the File section, you can choose an image type and size for your image. Click Open to open the image in Photoshop Elements. To edit the image, click on Image, or from the Edit menu, choose Edit. The following window appears. In the window, you can see an image on the right and a selection tool on the left. The two areas are separated by a border. To edit the image, drag a selection tool to one of the main sections of the image. Then drag the selection tool to any color area. The selected area is highlighted in blue. To undo a selection and go back to the previous area, click the Undo button. To redo a selection, click the Redo button. Photoshop Elements lets you toggle between editing and image areas to do multiple editing steps. Click the arrow in the image below to view the tools in the Editing section of the window. In the next section, you can see the tools in the Image section. To create a new image from one or more existing images, click on Image, or from the Edit menu, choose Create. The following window appears. In this window, you can select the images for the new image. To add more images, click on the Add image button. Then select the images. To resize an image, click on Image, or from the Edit menu, choose Canvas Size. The following window appears. In this window, you can set the size of the image or the area of an image (that is, select only the area or the complete image). To resize the image, drag the selection tool to one of the edges of the image. Then drag the selection tool to the desired size. You can also control the aspect ratio of the image by dragging the selection tool a681f4349e

How to Find a Job in Tech - kurrent ====== kmfrk _How To Find a Job in Tech_ \- it ought to be _Are You An Oxymoron_. The job boards in the UK is one of the most depressing things I've seen. _In the UK you get a notice that says_ > _" We've received your application for the position of... in.... We'll > review applications for this position in the next..."_ And even then, there's a 2-4 week wait before the interview, and the position can be filled months later. This is going to be your biggest issue in the interview process, not your skills. /rant. ------ Abundnce10 This lists things that are relevant but not definitive. Some of the most important points: Get involved with things before graduation. Try different kinds of careers. You don't need to go to law school. You don't need to go to college. You don't need to go to med school. You can also work at different kinds of companies, not just tech companies. Network with people and provide value to them, both on a personal level, and on a professional level. Make a goal of getting your degree while you are still in school. Don't wait till you graduate, and then find yourself in a ditch. ------ md224 You should be surrounded by people who love what they do. At a good company, you will find that people work passionately on things they love. At a bad company, you will find people working _for_ the thing they love. People who love what they do aren't interested in whether they get a title, or a raise, or a promotion, or a bonus for doing good work. They just love it. So, if you are not in a position to pick and choose, I guess the first thing to do is find a job where you are surrounded by people who love what they do. The rest of the advice is good too. ------ bwb This is a very well written article, I really liked it. Here are some extra resources that might

Q: Disable menu click not working on chrome I tried to do what i did on my previous question but its still not working. I know I need to check if the menu clicked its an active class, and remove if its not. How can i do that? this is not working for me: $("#menu").click(function(event) { if (!$("#menu.active").hasClass("active")) { event.preventDefault(); $("#menu").animate({ left: 0, }, 0); } }); My HTML: Home About Contact Help A:

I would say the problem is that you try to cancel the default action when the event is triggered for elements which don't have the class active. As you need to disable all click events during the animation you will need to re-listen to the click events once the animation is done. Also since you are using jquery you might want to bind the click event with 'on' so it isn't triggerig the default action until you want it to be triggered. $("#menu").on('click', function(event) { if (!$("#menu.active").hasClass("active")) { event.preventDefault(); $("#menu").animate({ left: 0, }, 0); } }); fiddle First name First name Last name Last name E-mail Bookkeeping Bookkeeping Acer is a registered CPA firm, which means it's professional and authorized to file a Federal income tax return for you.
