2017? After a while I've been having some problems with async/await features in VS2017. I tried to set the async attribute to true in the methods of my classes, but it seems that VS2017 is not supporting it, since if I try to re-write my code it changes to synchronous. Is there any way to get Visual Studio 2017 to realize that I want to use async/await in my class? Or should I search a plugin or extension to get this support? Thanks for the help! A: If you need to use await, use async... it will resolve the naming issue without you needing to do anything else. You can turn it on and off using the Keyword 'async' above the method declaration in the editor (Ctrl + K, A for example). You can add [async] to methods that don't need it, either by using the text tool or adding it as a text decoration. Q: Nesting query to get the total number of records in a query I have a query that I am trying to get the total number of records in using a Subquery that returns the
