

new model of the terrestrial biosphere, (2) the influence of the "sequential model ... So far, most models of the terrestrial biosphere have favored speed over accuracy. In models based on the hypothesis of sequential evolution of the biosphere, a sequence of geological events results in a new model of the terrestrial biosphere. (3) This sequence of geological events must include two phases: a) the "conservative" phase, during which the biosphere in its historical development does not experience drastic changes, and b) the "evolutionary" phase, during which the biosphere is subjected to drastic changes under the influence of various external factors.
