KeyMACRO is a free easy to use software that generates 256 bit MAC algorithm keys. It has a Windows GUI and is also available for OS X. You can use it to generate keys for encryption, authentication, key exchange and to apply a MAC algorithm to a file or stream of data. You can store a password with a key and then use it to generate a new key. You can also generate keys which are just used once. The key can be used by many users and passwords can be changed on a per-user basis. You can generate keys of all sizes from 5 bytes up to 256 bytes. You can generate keys using two different algorithms and two different encryption modes. In AES mode you can use a 128, 192 or 256 bit key. You can use AES mode with a 40, 48 or 64 byte key. In Twofish mode you can use a 64 or 128 bit key. You can use Twofish mode with a 40, 48 or 64 byte key. You can save the generated keys in XML, CSV, or PEM formats and they can be used to encrypt files or create password-protected zip files.
