The invention relates to a cartridge structure for medical purposes, wherein the cartridge includes a component, which is at least movable in a reciprocating manner in an axial direction, wherein the movement of the component is transmitted to a cylinder which is located movably in the cartridge, by means of a piston rod which is arranged in the cylinder and which is movable in an axial direction, wherein the piston rod is guided in the cylinder, in a non-positive manner, in particular, slideably, while being able to execute pivoting movements about an axis in a non-positive manner, in particular, slideably, wherein the component is in particular at least one medical valve, a peristaltic pump including such a medical valve, a valve-on-tip or a catheter, in particular, a balloon catheter. Such a cartridge structure, in particular, a cartridge structure which contains at least one medical valve, is known, for example, from DE 10 2007 044 872 B3. This patent application thus discloses a collapsible, in particular, elastic and elastic-plastic, self-inflating valve which is intended to be used in particular for a catheter system, in particular, a stent delivery system. The known catheter cartridge structure has a cylindrical housing with a plunger element which is movable in the axial direction. This cylindrical housing includes a plunger rod for guiding the plunger element in the housing, while permitting a reciprocating movement of the plunger element relative to the cylinder. By means of a displacement device which acts upon the plunger rod and is accommodated in the cylindrical housing, the plunger rod is supported during the reciprocating movement of the plunger element. A disadvantage of the known cartridge structure is that the piston rod of the displacement device is held, in a non-positive manner, in the cylinder in a manner which is fixed in the axial direction. As a result of this, the respective piston rod is not able to execute any relative movements in the axial direction and thus, is not able to compensate unevennesses of the cylinder into which the piston rod is accommodated, which are, however, to be compensated, for example, for the accommodation of inlets and outlets, and/or the accommodation of a connecting element which connects the piston rod to a displacement device. In order, thus, to be able to use a non-positive holding of the piston rod in the cylinder in a manner

Q: Ubuntu is freezing when browsing When I am browsing or scrolling the web my Ubuntu is freezing. It seems like it is only frozen when I am doing anything that involves scrolling the web, i.e. clicking on a link takes some time until the link is scrolled to the bottom. But when I am surfing the internet using the browser or by searching for something the mouse is moving smoothly and the screen doesn't freeze. This seems like a problem that happens only on my Ubuntu (I have installed Ubuntu using the LVM method on my computer). Does anyone have any idea what the problem could be? Thanks in advance! Edit: The problem seems to be solved now. I don't know how I managed to make it go away but I just had to press the power button and restart the computer. I don't know what caused it to disappear but I am glad I was able to come back to a working computer. A: You may need to reset your USB router/modem/whatever device that's attached to your USB ports. You're experience sounds quite similar to what I've been experiencing on my other computer a few days ago. I think I was plugged into a USB port which was using electricity from an external power supply to charge my phone and computer. The device was powered up and the computer was working fine until the phone powered up and the switch was flipped and it powered up and booted right away with my computer "freezing". I searched for this and the only viable solution I could find was to unplug all devices and then plug them back in. It worked on both computers (thanks to the solutions already found). So, the Good/Bad of this season: I'll start with the Good, as they come. 1. This was better than last year. It was just as well-paced as last year's. I really think the pacing was better, as all the characters have given their best performances. There are several moments of high emotion here, but they're moments of feeling, not moments of intensity. There are no super-ridiculous emotional breakthroughs, and I think that's a great thing. 2. The villain is interesting. He's smarter and more dangerous than Bruce Wayne. It's great that there's a threat to the whole city, and it really drives him to develop and
