Partial and complete inactivation of cytotoxic T-lymphocyte activity against mastocytoma cells by preincubation with 10(5) cells. This study was carried out to explore whether cytotoxic T cells could inactivate tumour cells by a mechanism of immune recognition similar to a mechanism of immune suppression. Mastocytoma cells (P815) pretreated with as few as 10(5) mastocytoma cells had the same effect as more than 10(8) mastocytoma cells. These observations indicate that 10(5) cells could be sufficient for the induction of unresponsiveness and that the effect was probably not caused by a cytolytic mechanism.
