Export in XML format for use with other programs like Microsoft Excel Requirements: Net Framework Limitations: 30 day Trial Recorded Data of Atmospheric CO2 Trends, 1981 – 2001 (Air Dated Version). This NASA Atmospheric Sciences Data Bulletin (ASDB) is a daily data file that represents the most extensive and detailed analysis of atmospheric carbon dioxide (CO2) ever made. The ASDB includes measurements of atmospheric CO2 from the Mauna Loa Observatory, Hawaii, from January 1981 to December 2001, corresponding to the period of records held at the Mauna Loa Observatory. The National Climatic Data Center (NCDC) also provides carbon dioxide data from the Fort Collins, Colorado, Global Change Research Data Center (GCRDC). The NCDC collection, based on a variety of sources, will be added to the ASDB in the future. These gases were measured via infrared absorption spectroscopy; average annual atmospheric composition of CO2 is expressed in parts per million (ppm) in the analysis. This report represents the most complete and extensive daily CO2 data set ever made available to the public and is unique among data sets in that the data are not interpolated. The data set is expressed in terms of actual measurements, rather than estimates, as reported in other NOAA's Atmospheric CO2 Data Reports. Even the longer term data are presented in their original form, including an analysis of their uncertainties.
