If I try to compile it with GCC gcc -g main.c -o main.out The program prints some addresses (return addresses of functions) instead of the addresses of variables. If I try to compile it with Keil uVision 5 on a Microchip K-series board the program prints everything correctly. So what I do is: When I compile I use the gcc-command from Keil and manually put the addresses of variables. Is there a solution to compile the program using gcc to print the addresses of the variables? A: gcc does not do debugging, it's up to the linker. First, save your callchain, and then run: dwarfwalk -c main.out | grep.bss. The result should be something like: 0x100000 -- main: 3da54e8ca3
