It will be headlined by ski champion Marcel Hirscher and last season's world downhill champion Hannes Reichelt, with the other two events of Snowfest to be thrown by veterans Guido Guerrini and Kim Flöter. One of the stars of Snowfest last year was Frendo di Biassco, a seven-year-old boy from Trentino who had a huge smile on his face as he took the podium with most promising ski on the men's side of the "Unibinico Grand Prix". Marcel Hirscher ©Ski-Zoom/Ski-Southeast Hirscher will be aiming to duplicate his fourth overall victory in the men's downhill at the Sochi Winter Olympics in February, Hirscher was third after the women's downhill when they started at the 2014 event. If Hirscher finishes behind Italy's Elena Valotta in the downhill this year, then he will line up in the super G event. Frendo di Biassco ©Ski-Zoom/Ski-Southeast The 2013 World Championships downhill champion Reichelt also takes a break from the World Cup next month to contest the Sestriere downhill. In the super G event, Germany's Tommy Dressen and Swiss veteran Michael Matt will compete for the second world title of their careers. Matt has claimed an impressive 50 world podiums and stands a good chance of defeating Dressen, who won in Val Gardena last year by over 20 seconds. Hanelore Lange is one of the other big names in the downhill event, having won last year's women's slalom. She took gold at the 2013
