[Medical-technical and organizational evaluation of the treatment of patients with bleeding peptic ulcer]. The medical-technical characteristics of the treatment of ulcer hemorrhage are presented, and the results of its assessment by medical experts and by management experts are given. The experts evaluation of professional results was most informative for the management of patients with the ischemic form of ulcer hemorrhage.

Management efficiency was chiefly determined by the treatment period. In this time, a multidisciplinary approach of the treatment should be carried out.Acetylation of desmethoxy-nortriptyline. The acetylation of a series of alkaloids (as triethylamine salts) by liquid acetylating reagents is reported. This method is applicable to the known alkaloid nortriptyline, which is of importance in the management of depression, but its use on tablets, capsules and granules was not greatly successful. The requirement for a simple and rapid determination of acetylation is evident from the finding that the more rapidly acetylated alcohols should give lower values for the acetylation index.While altcoins have experienced a meteoric rise in value against Bitcoin, Ethereum has been one of the few that has held relatively stable value despite the heavy price swings

The laboratory has developed a reproducible model of human intestinal mucosal inflammation in which disease is induced in the small and large intestine by oral antigen delivery. This study will focus on i-IEL and the biologic function of their mediators, termed proinflammatory cytokines. These experiments are the outgrowth of two major discoveries from our laboratory; first, we showed that i-IEL produce factors that down regulate antigen-specific immune responses in the intestine and second, we discovered that these mediators are released during antigen-specific T cell responses. i-IEL are critical to the mucosal immune system. We recently showed that activation of i-IEL, a key event for protective mucosal immunity, can be reproduced by oral delivery of antigen. The production of anti-inflammatory and proinflammatory cytokines by i-IEL will be studied. In vivo and in vitro models of human intestinal mucosal inflammation will be used to study these mechanisms. The specific aims are to demonstrate that i-IEL: (1) produce cytokines in vitro in response to antigen-specific T cell activation, and (2) produce cytokines in vivo in the intestinal mucosa in response to local antigen challenge. We have evidence that i-IEL in vitro produce TNFalpha and IL-13, and that IL-13

The effect of intravenous arginine on endotoxin (ET) induced alterations in blood flow to the small intestine (blood flow) and to the abdominal viscera (intravenous pressure) was studied in anesthetized dogs. Fourteen minutes after a single injection of ET (200 micrograms, i.v.), blood flow to the small intestine decreased in all animals by 10.6 +/- 1.6%. Arginine (80 mg/kg i.v.) protected against a decrease in blood flow to the small intestine, as demonstrated by a significant decrease in the decrease in blood flow (by 15.1 +/- 1.7%). Anterior mesenteric arterial pressure decreased in all animals following ET administration, and arginine attenuated the hypertension. These data suggest that
