From the President of the Senate Dear Colleagues, I am delighted to welcome you to this year's House of Commons Chamber renaming, an opportunity to commemorate the Hon. Geoffrey Howlett and the achievements of this great country for over two centuries. Now in its 2,000th year, Parliament of Canada also comes to you at a time of great economic uncertainty for all Canadians. In the year of the 80th anniversary of the Second World War, we must stand together to say no to blind hatred and say yes to a better Canada for future generations. I am not only sure that this Parliament will serve that cause well, but I am also confident that the people of Canada will find it moving and inspiring. I believe it is the role of Parliament to make available to Canadians the results of their profound collective effort. It is our role to make the work of our institutions visible, for all Canadians to understand the processes that shape their reality. These are national institutions which show Canada – a world champion in the development of democratic institutions. We are the only G7 country not to have conscription, and yet, one of the most successful arms control agreements of modern times is a legacy of this Parliament. It is our role, as an institution, to point to the achievements of Canadians – to show who we are and what we are doing for the country. This Chamber renaming project does that, and I thank the government for its fine leadership. This Remembrance Day, this year of the 75th anniversary of VE Day, is an appropriate time to celebrate the people of Canada and all of the bold deeds and generosity which helped to transform our world. It is my hope that the Chamber renaming will become a tradition in this House. In the past several years, we have seen a remarkable number of milestones on this floor
