Roblox is an online game platform and game creation system developed by Roblox Corporation that allows users to program games and play games created by other users. Created by David Baszucki and Erik Cassel in 2004 and released in 2006, the platform hosts user-created games of multiple genres coded in the programming language Lua. For most of Roblox's history, it was relatively small, both as a platform and a company. Roblox began to grow rapidly in the second half of the 2010s, and this growth has been accelerated by the COVID-19 pandemic. Roblox is free to play, with in-game purchases available through a virtual currency called Robux. As of August 2020, Roblox had over 164 million monthly active users, including more than half of all American children under 16. Although Roblox has received generally positive reviews from critics, it has faced criticism for its moderation, microtransactions, and exploitative practices directed toward children. Roblox was early to the concept of allowing users to program and create their own games, and the platform has been used for educational activities and to teach children how to program. Today, one of the longest-running video game series on Roblox is its free-to-play sandbox building game, Friends and Family. The game has been around since 2014 and was one of the first mobile games to introduce microtransactions, which have since become common in the game. Friends and Family is aimed at families, but the sandbox aspect of it has led to the game's high numbers of players. One of the most popular sandbox games in the series is Backyard Blocks 2, which was released on May 7, 2017. In 2019, Roblox launched the new Roblox Studio, a web app which allows users to create and develop their own games. This was followed by an iOS and Android mobile app in March and August of that year, respectively. Roblox Studio is inspired by Google's App Inventor and MIT's Scratch. In August 2016, Nintendo launched an augmented reality app named Pokémon Go on iOS and Android devices. Its popularity has been credited to its freedom to explore and social interface, where players are encouraged to explore the world of virtual reality and meet others with similar interests. In March 2017, the company was bought by Japanese company The Pokémon Company for $80 million, which gave the company the ability to offer cloud-based augmented reality technology that can be accessed on
